

I am one of many Voom subscribers around the country who live in dire fear of Voom being sold. With the new market for high definition and Voom's commitment to providing programming, a sale of Voom with no option for continued service would leave the market without a dedicated HD service. Continued competition is important to the satellite market. Voom LLC is dedicated to providing HD coverage where virtually none exists, they have an excellent track record in providing coverage, and allowing Voom to continue broadcasting, even with Evenstars satellite's, would be highly beneficial to the satellite market and allow competition to flourish in a limited market.
